You are welcome to attend any or all of the following sessions:

So, What is Workshop Model?

Wednesday, September 21

The basics of Writer's Workshop. How to use writer's notebooks and mini-lessons, as well as tools you can use to create a writing strategies-based lesson.

Using Mentor Text to Teach Craft

Thursday, November 17

Using examples of exceptional literature, student samples, and your own modeling to create straight forward mini-lessons that strengthen not only writing, but meta-cognition of the writing process.

Mindset and Conferring with Writers

Friday, January 20

How to use assessment to reach strong and struggling writers in meaningful ways. How to use prompting, guiding questions, and goal setting in conferring.

Embedding Grammar and Mechanics

Tuesday, March 14

How to embed grammar and mechanics into the workshop lesson you are already using; as well as visual cues that can be added to the writer's notebook.

STRUCTURE AND CONTENT:

The days are designed to be taken in sequence, but they are also topics that can be independent of one another.

The focus is K-12, but will be organic to the people in the room. The participants will drive the resources and discussion with their needs, questions, and interests. Questions ahead of time are encouraged.

Agendas, resources, and recommend book lists will be emailed a week before registration. Participants will be given access to the CESA 5 writing website after attendance.
