

encore presentation of the... "workshop and"

Recognizing that reading and writing workshop is much more than a day of training or a few days learning with your collaborative teams, CESA #4 is offering a series where educators can select the workshop that works for them! Each workshop is a separate event, but we welcome you to attend any and all if you'd like. Content will not be repeated in the sessions, but we will prepare your professional learning with a commitment to reading and writing workshop in mind.

workshop and the mini lesson

OCTOBER 29, 2019 | 9 AM-3 PM

Never underestimate the power of the mini lesson. A mini lesson is a core piece of the reading workshop or writing workshop. A mini lesson is a short lesson with a narrow focus that provides instruction in a skill or concept. This workshop will take a look at the essential parts of an effective mini lesson and how to keep the mini lesson "mini".

workshop and conferring & setting individual goals

FEBRUARY 3, 2020 | 9 AM-3 PM

Are you working really hard on student goals for reading and writing? Are your students "in" on those goals? How? Goal setting and conferring go hand in hand when it comes to reading and writing workshop. This pointed and guarded time for independent work during workshop can be bolstered by helping readers and writers set goals that THEY OWN! We will share resources for goal setting that make sense for the classroom and dig into strategies for connecting with readers and writers during conferring.

workshop and small groups

MARCH 31, 2020 | 9 AM-3 PM

In the world of workshop, whether it is reading or writing, small groups can prove to be a tricky structure for teachers. This workshop will address the sticking points, direct participants to some resources for enhancing small group, and provide a solid base around some big ideas about small groups. Come if you are curious about the role of assessment, how to shift the load to students, ideas for supporting without over scaffolding and some takeaways for predictable small groups.
