PBIS Leadership Conference

Join us for the 2020 PBIS Leadership Conference via live stream! Featuring PBIS and equity leaders from the local to national level

We're excited to collaborate with the Wisconsin RtI Center to bring you national- and state-level presenters via live stream on Tuesday, August 11 from 8:30 a.m. to 3:45 p.m. We're connecting into the 2020 PBIS Leadership Conference to bring you a unique learning opportunity that is close to home with your team and regional peers. We'll facilitate conversations after the keynote and between the three live-streamed sessions. You can even ask the presenters your questions—live!

Keynote Address: Dr. Rhonda Nese

Rhonda Nese, PhD, will share the true foundation of PBIS built on relationships, caring, and seeing our most vulnerable students as the ones we need to invest in the most.

Session A: Is my system cheating on me? Questions to ask and info to examine if you're concerned

Presenters: Jill Koenitzer and Milaney Levenson—Despite inclusive, intentional mission and vision statements, systems can be deceiving and fail students we care deeply about. In order to determine where our systems might be “cheating” on us, we must ask difficult questions. By digging into and disaggregating data, schools can improve universal supports, plan programs, change classroom instruction, and improve overall supports for all students.

Session B: Create a dynamic tier 2 professional learning plan for the entire staff

Presenters: Emilie O'Connor and Sarah Nelson—Effective and efficient tier 2 interventions require the entire staff to play a role. When teams know the essential components of a professional learning plan, they gain the prowess to transfer that learning to make improvements, build capacity, and sustain implementation. We'll share key strategies that include the entire staff in the professional learning plan for tier 2 interventions and highlight school successes for comparison.

Session C: Systems work for those who build them: ensuring success for all students

Presenters: Kent Smith and Milaney Levenson—Systems are perfectly designed to achieve the outcomes they do, regardless of intent. Participants will examine components of universal PBIS systems that contribute to disparate impacts across student groups and learn strategies to attend to these components to ensure success for ALL students.
