Description

READ 180, by Scholastic, leverages adaptive technology to individualize instruction for students and provides powerful data for differentiation to teachers. Studies have conclusively shown that when schools implement and follow the Instructional Model, significant gains can be expected after one or two years of program participation.

In this network, teachers will:

- Develop a detailed model of the reading process strongly supported by neurologists, psycholinguists, and reading specialists
- Use that model to better understand READ 180 Instructional Model and interpret READ 180 data
- Acquire the diagnostic and prescriptive skills to further differentiate by working directly with students, using coaching language supported by their reading process model
- Gain collaborative and coaching support around the student data brought to each network meeting.
- Increase options for differentiation with READ 180 materials

Who should attend?

Teachers using the READ 180 materials, literacy coaches, reading specialists, and administrators supporting teachers using READ 180 materials with students
