

NANCY AHKAVAN: TEACHING READING IN TITLE I SCHOOLS

Join Nancy Ahkavan, well-known author, educational leader and professional developer, as she focuses on literacy instruction in Title I schools. She will help teachers and leaders focus what's important--the children, the standards and on your own teaching. Rather than resorting to prescriptive interventions that are highly marketed and deemed "research-based," you will learn more about balanced literacy, an essential approach that helps ALL children learn to read. Nancy will share classroom-tested solutions to the unique challenges and funding-dependent federal and state mandates that Title I schools face.

In addition to the foundations and benefits of balanced literacy, you will learn how to: create a classroom reading library, focus on lessons from phonics to comprehension strategies, and design units of study for kindergarten through third grade and use a learning wall for various units of study

Nancy will also address the Title I guidelines and fundamental principles that impact your work in schools.
