

Invites you to attend:

Reaching and Teaching Students in Poverty:

An Equity Literacy Approach Presented by: Paul Gorski

If we want to shrink the economic achievement gap, we need to begin with an approach built around a more robust set of knowledge and skills. Paul Gorski calls this approach equity literacy: what we need to know to create and sustain equitable, inclusive learning environments for all students.

In this workshop we will:

- Learn to understand how students in poverty face the barriers and biases (the inequitable access to opportunity) which affect their school performance.
- Discuss research-backed strategies for what we can do in our classrooms and schools to create more empowering conditions for our most marginalized students.

December 2, 2015

8:30-2:00

Glacier Canyon Lodge at The Wilderness in Wisconsin Dells

To register:

