

Ethics, Professional Boundaries & the Law for School Social Workers

January 26, 2011

Do you ever feel like your ethical responsibilities and the law are in conflict? Are professional colleagues you respect telling you different stories about what some laws say you can or cannot do? This workshop is designed specifically for Wisconsin school social workers and will examine the complex and challenging interaction of ethics, professional boundaries, and state and federal laws governing sharing of confidential information and minors' access to confidential services.

Following instruction utilizing a variety of DPI publications and copies of the applicable state and federal laws, learning will be applied by participants within small groups through problem-solving and discussion of common case scenarios faced by school social workers. Questions and dialogue are encouraged throughout the presentation.

This workshop is designed to meet the continuing education requirements regarding ethics for social workers certified through the Wisconsin Department of Regulation and Licensing.
