Building Capacity and Sustainability for a Response to Intervention System

“If we plod across this new territory, heads down, our attention focused on specific features of the land, we may fail to look up and take in the whole of things here.” Margaret Wheatley

The work of RtI is complex, detail rich, and just a little crazy making! It is easy to get lost! Let’s share our experiences as we “...look up...”

Collaboration is essential to sustain school cultures that adapt to changing student needs and succeed in improving student achievement outcomes. Many CESA #2 school leaders have requested a local forum for collaboration with other school and district leaders about RtI implementation.

Participants in other networks have reported that the most valuable part of the network meeting is the open ended sharing of successes and challenges; therefore, we will offer minimal structure but will be available to respond to the group concerns, desires, and needs.

Activities will include:

- Brief RtI Overview
- Schools share RtI experiences: successes and challenges
- Networking conversations addressing common concerns

Target Audience: Principals and School Teacher and Parent Leaders
