

Differentiated Instruction for English Language Learners

February 25, 2011 and March 24, 2011

- Looking to differentiate instruction for your English language learners to promote academic language development and achievement?
- Trying to reach your linguistically diverse students but not sure where to start or what strategies have the greatest impact in your content area(s) at your grade level?
- Want to collaborate with colleagues to support English language learners but struggling to find the time?

THE Answer....

CESA 6, in collaboration with WIDA, invite school teams and individuals to participate in a professional development package combining two interactive workshops with follow-up coaching options. Coaching, available in varied forms, provides feedback and engages teams or individuals in reflective dialogue as they integrate the workshop content into their unique classroom situations. This professional learning opportunity provides a comprehensive, customized, job-embedded experience.

Participants will...

- Expand their knowledge of research-based best practice for teaching academic vocabulary across the content areas.
- Understand the "what" and "how" of academic language development.
- Integrate differentiated instructional practices across content areas to promote academic language development and achievement of English language learners.
- Build their "bank" of resources and strategies to meet the unique needs of their ELL population in their school/district.

About the Presenters

Melissa Paton, WIDA PD Consultant

Melissa Paton is passionate about creating educational equity for English Language Learners which is why she has found a home at WIDA. Her fifteen years of teaching experience have been devoted to working solely with students with diverse linguistic backgrounds and to helping all teachers to build their capacity for developing students' language acquisition. Her interest stems from an upbringing in a multi-lingual home where she developed an interest in language, culture and social justice at an early age.

Jo Ann Hanrahan, CESA 6

Jo Ann is the Coordinator of Differentiated Teaching and Learning for CESA 6. As part of this role, she coordinates the CESA 6 Title III Consortium and ELL Network through the Center for Culturally and Linguistically Diverse Learners. Jo Ann supports educators in meeting the unique needs of English language learners, building appreciation for cultural diversity, and promoting educational equity. As an experienced educator and trained instructional coach, she provides formative feedback, facilitates reflection, and encourages on-going collaboration to successfully transition educational research and theory into embedded instructional practice.
