21st Century English Language Arts Seminar

A Two-Part Series
Presented By: Emilie Amundson

"I feel more educated on how to prepare my non-college-bound and college-bound writers for the next step."

"This workshop really helped solidify for me the real world applications we can use to incorporate 21st Century skills into our language arts classrooms."

Join Emilie Amundson, English Language Arts Consultant for the DPI, as she facilitates this very important networking session for secondary English teachers. The intent of this seminar is to build teacher leadership and capacity around thoughtful English Language Arts planning. The seminar includes panel discussion with post-secondary instructors and local employers about student/worker expectations, major research-based recommendations, and in-depth study of the 21st Century Skills Framework. Participants should bring a piece of literature or non-fiction text that you teach that is unique, as well as a unit you are interested in revising.
