Traditional approaches to FBA (Functional Behavior Assessment) and BIP (Behavior Intervention Plan) do not always account for the impact toxic stress has on behavior, despite the fact that exposure to adversity in childhood is incredibly common. Through this training, school teams will learn the impact toxic stress has on neurological functioning and subsequently on the behaviors that we see in school.

Teams will learn how to consider these factors when developing a proactive and holistic BIP (Behavior Intervention Plan). Please bring copies of a recent FBA/BIP for your team's review and reflection.

Target Audience:

This training day is designed to support teams of practitioners in expanding and enhancing FBA and BIP process. Special Education Teachers, School Psychologists and other support personnel contributing to the FBA process should attend together.
