Guided reading, a key component of a comprehensive literacy program, provides a framework for teachers to flexibly group students to meet their individual needs.

We will explore the guided reading instructional decisions needed to move readers forward in the primary grades (K-2). Decision points include using assessments to group students and pinpoint a focus; choosing an appropriate text; prompting for strategic processing; targeting phonics skills for guided word study; and integrating guided writing. The presentation will also introduce RISE--a powerful, short-term intervention based on Jan's Next Step lesson framework. Learn how you can help every student become a better reader.
