In this engaging, relevant, and practical program, learn about the importance of implementing trauma-invested practices in the school setting. Incorporating research, building a common vocabulary, and exploring the impact of stress on brain development.

Going to this conference will provide much needed tools to bring back to the classroom in order to find success in working with all students.

Leadership in a #Trauma Invested Setting

This program allows participants to deepen their learning and hone their collective focus. Participants will reflect on their personal missions as they analyze WHY they do what they do. Then, using powerful scenarios, teams will collaborate on a proven, replicable model for identifying student needs, building empathy, and generating strategies for supporting healthy adult and student growth.

Learning Outcomes:

Participants will deepen their understanding of the value of fostering a safe, predictable, and consistent learning environment – one that is #TraumaInvested.

Participants will embrace the need to build self-awareness and tend to their self-care in order to be primed and ready to effectively support their students and children.

Participants will roll up their sleeves and build a strategic, realistic, intentional plan to become more Trauma Invested in their practices.

Who Should Attend?

Send a team! The program is appropriate for teachers, principals, student services directors, curriculum directors, superintendents, school counselors, social workers and psychologists.

“You will receive tangible methods to help ALL students in your classroom, yet target students who have experienced trauma. Since attending the conference, I am able to reach my “tough nuggets” and make a stronger impact.”

-Elise Elmsblad, Kenosha Unified School District
