Grouping Strategies in a Concurrent Teaching Model

DESCRIPTION: Join us as we look at varying methods to effectively group students when teaching in a concurrent model. We will have tips and templates to help set-up and manage groups both in person and virtually simultaneously. We will also talk about low-tech options that can be successful for both groups. Bring your ideas and questions for a collaborative experience!

We feature three different options to attend this session. Choose the date and time that works best for you! All sessions contain the same content.

PRESENTER: Beth Clarke

Beth Clarke is an innovative educator with a passion for digital leadership. She loves working with districts and teachers to unleash potential by leveraging digital tools and resources. Beth earned her Undergraduate degree in Art Education and her Graduate degree in Instructional Technology from UW-Whitewater. Additionally, she has procured her Education Administration licenses for Principalship and Director of Curriculum and Instruction from Edgewood College. She has a love of learning and applying new strategies to classroom opportunities, professional learning, and presentations.
