

Just-In-Time Behavioral Project Workshop

Join CESA 4 as we welcome Eric P. Hartwig, Ph.D., Administrator of Pupil Services for the Marathon County Children with Disabilities Education Board and is the author and principle trainer on the Just-in-Time: Behavioral Initiative Project. Dr. Hartwig has done extensive research on discipline, school violence, psycho educational assessment and related special education issues.

The “Just-In-Time” Behavior Project (JITB) is designed to help districts rethink and revamp the way they approach discipline, giving teachers practical tips they can apply right away. This project will make prevention the No. 1 priority by building a network of mentors among teachers and administrators.

Just-In-time is about trying to get behind behavior, understanding what makes people and students resistant; allowing your staff to use behavior management techniques they’re comfortable with rather than insisting on a cookie-cutter discipline method.
