

How We Show Up Matters

October 21 & November 18

8:00 - 9:30 AM

Virtual

FACILITATED BY:
YOLANDA JACKSON-LEWIS,
CENTER 4ALL

Experts would agree that the first step in becoming more equitable and inclusive is to have a solid understanding of your own culture. During this professional learning experience, participants will examine Emotional Intelligence (EQ), Social Identity, and Personal Culture and Background to help you "Show Up" in the best way possible for your students.

No substitute teacher is required for you to attend this PD opportunity... come as you are! This virtual event will take place two Saturday mornings, allowing you to attend in your jammies doing your morning routine.

Key Takeaways

Over the course of two sessions, participants will:

- Discuss effective ways to build workspaces and learning environments that are inclusive-a place where everyone belongs
- Explore ways to make your own classroom more welcoming so all students feel a sense of belonging
- Reflect on ways Emotional Intelligence (EQ), Social Identity and Personal Culture & Background shows up in both our personal and professional spaces
- Understand how Social Identity links to privilege and Personal Culture & Background feeds unconscious bias

Reserve your spot to gain knowledge and understanding that benefits you and your personal and professional workspaces.

$150/person

Online check-in: 15 minutes before start time