Improving Relationships & Results

Building Family-School Partnerships

A set of three-one day workshops for parents, teachers, principals and administrators

Using training modules from the National Center for Special Education Accountability Monitoring (NCSEAM) and the Wisconsin Professional Development Model (WPDM)

All trainings address:

Indicators #3 & #8

Teacher Standard #10

Teams from individual school districts are encouraged to attend. Suggested teams might include a combination of the following members (Grades K-6); Parents (regular and special education), Administrators, Teachers (General and Special Education), Reading Specialists, Math Specialists, Staff from: Title 1, ELL, Gifted and Talented

Module #1: Reading Module

Parents are key to the development of a child's attitude about reading. The parent also plays a key role in highlighting the importance of reading in everyday life. The teacher is also critical to not only lay the foundation for reading, but to connect the school to the learning that occurs in the home environment. This session will provide various effective reading strategies that have been proven to support reading in the home. The teams will learn many different reading strategies for schools and families that have been proven to be effective. Methods for instituting these strategies and thorough handouts describing the methodologies will be provided.

Module #2: Math Module

According to the 2008 final report of the National Mathematics Advisory Panel, teachers and other educational leaders should consistently help students and parents understand the importance of effort as it relates to improved math performance. While teachers may sometimes assume that students need to be of a certain age, in a certain stage, or ready for math instruction these theories, have consistently been shown wrong. This session will assist school teams in providing effective interventions that can be used in the home and school. Teams will learn how to identify math problems and the best interventions to use for each type of difficulty. Strategies that will include families in the intervention process will be discussed in great detail.
