

Music Apps for the iPad Tuesday, October 30, 2012

Instructor: Jim Welander

The iPad is a great tool for students in music classes. The device has access to the Internet for classroom discussion on topics, and the touch screen allows the device to be played like an instrument for instructional uses. Different iPad applications replicate the strings on a guitar or the keys on a piano. Other programs on the iPad allow users to play various instruments, while drums and bass guitars play in the background. In this workshop we will be exploring music apps of all types and how to use them in the music classroom. We might even form an iPad Band!
