Catching the Best Wave: Enhancing Online Searching and Resource Strategies

Who: K-12 teachers and other interested educators

When: Wednesday, February 24 - Tuesday, April 20, 2010

Description:

This online course will examine a variety of online tools to improve technology integration in the classroom: Internet searching strategies (pre-searching, search engines, meta-search engines, directories, advanced searches), Web evaluation, Internet use concerns (copyright, safety, plagiarism, cyber bullying), Teacher Resources (BadgerLink, Thinkfinity, American Memories, etc...) and Teacher Tools (e.g., wiki, social bookmarking, webquests, hotlists, virtual field trips). Participants will examine resources, strategies, and ideas through weekly discussions with other participants.

Participants will engage in both structured and independent exploration of online searching strategies and resources that can be used in enhancing their classroom instruction. You will 'learn' from the other participants and weekly course materials.

During this online class you will:

1. complete weekly readings, viewing of websites, or hands-on assignments that will provide techniques on Internet searching, website evaluation, and resources to use in the classroom.
2. participate in weekly online discussions based on readings and activities.
3. create a lesson plan that incorporates the effective use of one or more techniques that are covered during class.

Viterbo Credit: Two graduate credits from Viterbo University will be available for $180. Enrollment forms will be mailed to participants prior to the start date of the class.
