The Wisconsin Department of Public Instruction believes that the concepts of RtI align with four-year-old kindergarten (4K) and early childhood programs in health, mental health, home visiting, childcare, Head Start, and early childhood special education. In order for the framework to be most effective at this level, the unique characteristics of young children and their circumstances must be considered.

RtI in Early Childhood Afternoon Workshop Series seeks to explore what RtI in Early Childhood should look like. The two workshops will divide time on the topics below. The first afternoon workshop will provide an introduction and overview of issues related to RtI in early childhood settings listed on the results of a participant survey:

1. Evidence-based teaching
 - a. Differentiated instruction
 - b. Intentional teaching
 - c. Learning environment
 - d. Using child data to improve learning
2. Use of WI Model Early Learning Standards and the Common Core State Standards to guide curriculum decisions
3. Collaboration in the context of culturally responsive practices
4. Balanced assessment
5. Screening and assessment tools/strategies
