Wisconsin educators collaborated with educators from 12 other states to create alternate achievement standards aligned to the Common Core State Standards. These alternate achievement standards are called the Common Core Essential Elements (CCEE) in English, Language Arts, and Mathematics.

The CCEE were developed to satisfy the requirement of the U.S. Department of Education that Wisconsin have alternate achievement standards for its students with significant cognitive disabilities that are clearly linked to grade-level academic content standards, promote access to the general curriculum and reflect professional judgment of the highest expectation possible.

April 16, 2013

The CCEE course will be offered online. Register here:

<http://login.myquickreg.com/event/event.cfm?eventid=6068>

Login information will be sent to you on April 15th.

The training will take approximately 4 hours to complete and you will have one week to complete the course.
