October 4, 2013; November 5, 2013; February 11, 2014 & April 8, 2014

Presenter: Mary Ann Hudziak

Description

A great diversity exists among learners. The educational community has a responsibility to identify and develop the talents of children who are gifted and talented in the areas of general intellectual ability, specific academic ability, creativity, artistic ability and leadership. Many schools are struggling to meet these needs. This network offers support for those providing direction for the education of gifted and talented students.

Network Objectives

- What process does your district and school use to identify gifted and talented students?
- How can we learn from each other to provide rich opportunities for our gifted and talented learners?
- What types of programs or opportunities does your district and school offer for gifted and talented students that are systematic and continuous? How do they connect to core curriculum?
- What help do you need or can you offer to improve opportunities for gifted and talented students?
- What resources are available?

Who should attend?

- Gifted and Talented Teachers/Coordinators
