- Do you ever feel that your teacher training didn't prepare you for work outside of self-contained classrooms?
- Do you stress about how you can get families and caregivers to help teach their children through daily activities?
- Do you want to know how your students can accomplish more when you actually see them less?
- Do you want to know how to honor all of your families when they are all so diverse?

Routines Based Interview (RBI) is a process for looking at child's natural environment to learn what supports they need to become more independent and engaged and to have improved social relationships. This interactive training will include demonstration and feedback. By the end of the training learners will be able to:

- Explain purpose and benefits of RBI to colleagues and families/caregivers.
- List the three foundations of learning and how they relate to completing the RBI.
- Identify all RBI components.

We encourage you to attend to learn efficient approaches to gathering priority information or developing more functional IEPs.
