Poverty and Race

Understanding cultural and racial differences and the effects on learning

August 16—19, 2010
8:00 AM—4:00 PM
CESA 6
2300 State Road 44
Oshkosh, WI 54904

Registration Deadline:
August 6, 2010

Course Description

Most schools in the United States today operate by white middle class values. The students from poverty and diverse backgrounds often find it difficult to be successful in educational environments.

This workshop examines factors that impact academic achievement for students from low socio-economic and diverse environments.

Sessions topics to include

- culturally relevant strategies
- instructional resources
- economic issues impacting all groups of students
- using appropriate terminologies
- providing equitable school and classroom climates
- avoiding group stereotyping
- mental health
- trauma
- abuse/neglect

This workshop will focus attention on those conditions that create opportunities or resources for students. Educators, with a better understanding of poverty, race and other factors that interfere with learning, will be capable of recognizing and accessing resources they might not have been aware of previously.

This workshop will include three days of intense “in classroom” presentation, discussion, guest speakers and group work, as well as a fourth day of field trips to expose participants to resources that are available within the community.

Limited to the first 30 participants!

For the past four years Ron and Deb have co-taught this workshop for educators in the Fox Valley Area and other parts of the state.

CESA 6 is excited to be able to provide this important workshop for all of the districts they serve.

Presenters:

Ron Dunlap

CREATE Coordinator
CESA 6

Ron has devoted thirty-seven years to educating young people from K-8 to post secondary levels. For eighteen years, he served the students in the Appleton Area School District. Prior to retirement in December 2008, he was an elementary principal and Coordinator of Minority Services in the district. He is currently the CREATE Wisconsin Coordinator at CESA 6.

Deb Larson

MSW LCSW
School Social Worker
Menasha Joint School District

For the past 29 years, Deb Larson has been a school social worker at all levels, including twelve years at Appleton Central Alternative middle and high schools for students with significant academic, behavioral and/or emotional difficulties. Additionally, she has experience in the areas of corrections, psychiatric inpatient programs and as a mental health therapist. Deb currently works for the Menasha Schools providing services and support to families and students in need.
